EXCESS PROFITS TAX.

DEPOSE THE TURNING POINT IN INDUSTRIAL DEPRESSION?

IMMEDIATE EFFECTS.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain's announcement at Birmingham, although not entirely unexpected, was hailed with a widespread sigh of satisfaction, especially from manufacturers and business men who for the past six months have, almost with a single voice, been campaigning against the excess profits tax, contending that it is an important factor in the present slump. The opinion is widely expressed that the announcement will produce a turning point in the industrial depression, not only on account of the demise of the most unpopular tax and the Government's intention not to increase taxation, but because it is an indication that the Government is determined to cut down the Budget. It is pointed out that apart from the psychological effect, all round material effects are most likely to accrue, not the least of which will be an increased yield for the Exchequer. News of one of the immediate effects of the Chancellor's decision comes from Edinburgh where export houses are very jubilant, especially at the hint of protection against dumping. Scottish firms to-day received more orders than for weeks past.

"ROBBERS' ENTENTE"

REPARATIONS TERMS ROUSE MUNICH CROWD TO FURY.

CRY FOR REVENGE.

BERLIN, February 4.

The reparations terms have repercussions in the general social life of Bavaria and Baden both of which have forbidden public celebration or carnivals as ill according with the gravity of the situation. Prussia less drastically ordered the police to keep celebrations proper bounds. A mass meeting of 3,000 political enthusiasts at Munich marched to the hotel where the Allied commission was housed and made violent speeches against the "Robber Entente." They dispersed with shouts of "Revenge!" "Down with France!" and "Deutschland Ueber Alles!"

COAL DELIVERIES.

BERLIN, February 4.

The Tagblatt publishes a memorandum handed to the Allies at Paris by Herr Bergmann seeking to demonstrate the impossibility of Germany continuing the coal deliveries on the scale prescribed by the Spa agreement. The German Government now proposes to deliver to the Allies 1,800,000 tons a month for the next six months and requests a continuance of payment of the five marks gold premium a ton, also additional cash compensation in order to adjust the difference between inland and world market prices.

GENERAL DISARMAMENT.

AMERICANS FAVOUR INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE.

WASHINGTON, February 4.

The House of Representatives foreign affairs committee has reported favourably on the resolution authorising the President to call an international disarmament conference at Washington.

WASHINGTON, February 4.

Mr. Butler, Chairman of the House of Representatives naval committee, who recently had a conference with President-elect Harding at the latter's house, stated that the United States would call an international conference to discuss a disarmament conference and then a secret session would hear the views of prominent naval men.

AMERICAN NAVAL ATTITUDE.

WASHINGTON, February 4.

The report of the Navy Board argues that the policy of equal armaments will tend to diminish their growth and lessen the danger of sudden war. The Board strenuously opposes any rest period or limitation of armaments which would interfere with the United States' present building programme. The report attributes the movement of Britain towards a cessation of construction to the great preponderance of her navy and the present economic situation in the British Empire. The report also expresses the opinion that the value of American warships now building will not be seriously impaired for many years, and declares that it would be the height of un wisdom for any nation possessing sea power to change its practice on mere theories with regard to the future development of new untried weapons like submarines and aircraft, but the new weapons must be developed as rapidly as possible.

JAVA LEPROS COLONY.

SALVATION ARMY WORKERS' SACRIFICE.

NEW YORK, February 4.

Eight European Salvation Army Officers, including Captain and Mrs. Louis, of Amsterdam, arrived en route to the leprosy colony in Java where they expect to arrive about April 1. The party volunteered to work at the colony in response to the Dutch Government's appeal to General Booth. Captain Louis stated that his brother had practically started work among the leprosy. His wife and he were expected to follow his footsteps and give their lives to relieve the leprosy.

"A FOOL'S PARADISE"

QUEENSLAND'S PREMIER FEARS ASIATIC INVASION.

BRISBANE, February 4.

The Premier, Mr. Theodore, in a speech at the Trades Hall, said that anyone doubting that Australians would soon be called on to defend their homes against Asiatic invasion was living in a fool's paradise. Asiatic ideals and aspirations menaced the ideals of the Australian Labour Party.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

RESULT OF THE WRITING COMPETITION.

My dear Children,
I was very pleased with the result of the writing competition. The two prizes were won by Arthur White (aged 7) and Wan Tso Shing (aged 12). They wrote about a parrot and a dog, as you will read for yourselves.
Both were very neatly written and well-spelt.

I must also mention Elsa Batalha, Jean Dahlitz and Olive White, who sent in very good papers, and these I will publish next week. Olive White is a young contributor as she is only four years old.

A nice book each has been sent to Arthur White and Wan Tso Shing.

Your loving,
PETER PAN.

A PARROT.

When I lived in England there was a Parrot who stayed with us while his master went on holidays. Now the parrot was very saucy and could talk very well.

It used to say Kasa-Coo. Kasa-Coo is good night in West African.

It was fed on bananas and cream
all the way home to England.

She could sing The Campbells are coming and You Promised to buy me a bunch of blue Ribbons. When my sister was a baby and Mother was bathing her Polly said Fat little baby and Mother said Yes Polly and she answered Give her a nice clean perch.

(Signed) ARTHUR WHITE,
Age 7 years.

MY DOG.

I had a little terrier, called Gyp, which was the best pet of mine. In many ways he proved himself the very dog people loved. He could do many tricks, which I taught him;
just the time that he could learn.
He could catch a cube-sugar by his mouth, when I put it on his nose and could jump over a stick about as high as three feet, also many other such tricks he could do quite well. But the best was that he could walk with only his fore-legs. Well all these were quite enough to show that he was clever. Not only these, but there were many good deeds that he had done to me when I was helpless. On one occasion I was walking with him when suddenly there came two robbers, who scared me very much. They came towards me and wished to rob me. Gyp was a clever dog as you know and could jump very high, so he jumped upon the robbers and fought with them.
He was nearly killed, but he was brave instead of afraid until a police came and caught the robbers. I was very glad and carried him home.
After that, I always gave him many good things to eat and treated him
so kindly like a baby for he saved
my life.

(Signed) Wan Tso Shing,
Age 12.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Elsa and Edna Batalha. That was a mistake of mine to say that Elsa had asked for the story of Mary and Snip and Snop, not Elsa! But still it did not really matter very much as long as you had the story, did it? I always like to have your nicely written letters.

THE BOX IN THE ATTIC.

Did you ever move into a new house when you were about eight or ten years old?
If you did you will know what fun
you have for days exploring and finding out all sorts of things about the house and garden.

Molly and Jack had moved into an old fashioned house in the country, a house which was full of cupboards and which had long winding passages with steps up and down to all the rooms. Most of the rooms led out of one another and it was an ideal place for hide and seek.

Up at the top of the house there were three large attics and here, one day, they made the discovery that after pulling out some loose bricks in the corner of one attic they were able to squeeze through the hole and then they found themselves in a large room up in the rafters. They put the bricks back again very carefully and did not tell anyone what they had found.

In the same attic there was a large cupboard with shelves all round the top and though there was a skylight just outside the cupboard the far end was in the dark, so Molly held the candle while Jack got up on a chair and had a good look round the shelves.

"On Molly," he cried suddenly.
"there is something on the shelf right in the corner. Whatever can it be?"

Molly jumped on the chair beside him and held up the candle and then they saw it was a big fat box.

"Quick, quick Jack," said Molly.
"Get it down and perhaps we shall find all sorts of things in it."

So Jack lifted the box down and they took it out of the cupboard and put it on the floor under the skylight
where they could see better.

But then they found that it was locked and you can imagine how impatient they were to open it.

"I know what we can do," said Molly, after she had thought for a minute. "Mother has lots of keys on her dressing table. I'll run and get them and perhaps one of them will fit the box."

"That's a good idea," Jack replied and off Molly ran and fetched the keys.

They tried ever so many and at last, just as they were beginning to despair of finding one that would open it, Molly fitted one tiny key into the lock which seemed as if it were made for it and the box opened quite easily.

"Oh how stupid!" Jack cried as they looked inside. "There's nothing in it but some very dirty old stamps!"

And that was all there was—just about twenty old foreign stamps.

"That's horribly disappointing," said Molly, who had expected to find something really valuable and who would hardly have been surprised if there had been a diamond necklace
in the box.

Just then their father called up the stairs. "What are you children doing up there? Your Uncle Tommy has come and wants to see you."

"All right Daddy we're coming!"
they answered, and they hurried down to see their Uncle Tommy who was one of their favourite Uncles.

"What have you got in that dusty old box Jack?" Uncle Tommy said when he saw them. "Some great treasure?"

"No Uncle," answered Jack. "Only some stupid old stamps that we have found in a cupboard in the attic."

"Let me have a look at them Jack,"
said Uncle Tommy. "I know a bit about these things."

He looked carefully at the stamps for a minute or two and then gave a laugh and turning to Jack's father said, "This is what these two thought was 'only rubbish' and, if I am not mistaken, they are worth more money than the two of them have ever seen yet in their short lives!"

"This was perfectly true as Uncle Tommy was a stamp collector and knew all about such things."

It turned out to be a great discovery for Uncle Tommy, when he had found out what the stamps were worth, bought them from Molly and Jack and put the money in the Savings Bank for them.

Besides this he gave them half a crown each to spend, which they thought was worth all the money in the Savings Bank!

TRADE, JUSTICE, PUBLIC SERVICE.

HONGKONG, SATURDAY, FEB. 5, 1921.

ADVERSARIA.

Sad words, in the opinion of an American poet, are "might have been." Only, in my opinion, when sad people use them in a sad way. Sadder to me are the words "has been," for I'm one. How jolly are the words "might have been," for example, when followed by the word "worse." About three months ago I had the tip to buy Cements, when they stood at seven. They are now round about twelve. I hear of a man who bought 3,000 of them. I have, in fact, gazed upon him and admired his very pleased countenance. But did I envy him, with sadness, because he dared to plunge while I stood shivering on the brink? Not I. He cannot eat more meals a day than I, with greater enjoyment. Indeed, the poor fellow cannot now drink so much beer as I do, because of its effects upon his figure. We are both happy, therefore we are equals, whatever the bank cashier may think.

Last year the China Mail was fined for "contempt of court," because it commented on a case committed for trial. The comment was in the prisoner's favour, and it turned out that the Crown Solicitor entered a nolle prosequi. All of which was in our favour. Are we now to suppose that our conviction was also had in law? Mr. Justice Lush and Mr. Justice McCardie on December 10, enunciated from the Bench the decision that comment on an individual's conduct is permissible in spite of the fact that an appeal regarding it is pending. Mr. Justice Lush explained the purpose of comment for contempt. The rule should not operate unduly or unfairly or unjustly. It was never intended it should be applied so as to prevent a person from making fair observation with regard to a decision already arrived at by a competent court. (In our case a competent court had committed a man, and we expressed the view that he should not have been committed). Mr. Justice Lush said the doctrine of contempt of court should not be extended unwarrantably and extravagantly. I agree with his Lordship.

Mr. Ng Cheong Yew PUBLIC OPINION. Very well written letter in the Daily Press on Tuesday, in which he said nothing that was new and nothing that was informative about the University or its critics. As an essay in English composition, by a young Chinese, an examiner would give it good marks. As a contribution to thought, except as a revelation to the queer working of the student mind, its merit was inconspicuous. Indeed, the marvel is that their address to his own case did not strike him as he penned these words: "The writer's thoughts (if these happen to be any) are so obscured by the clouds of finely-turned phrases that they fail to reach the understanding." It was written as a reply to one printed in the China Mail, and it should have come to the China Mail. The editor tells me he is glad it did not, because the job of boiling it down to reasonable compass would have been a tedious one. He would have had to excuse those pretty platitudes about Public Opinion for instance. The queer thing about Public Opinion is that the public has no opinion. It has echoes. Public opinion, honestly regarded, has two facets, one being approval and endorsement of some private opinion, and the other disapproval of the same. When a private opinion has been publicly presented, and received large support, the result is called Public Opinion. Support generally follows the cleverest or most persuasively presented private opinion. Hence public opinion is usually merely the private opinion of the successful demagogue—or of the conductor of a newspaper.

This young man is impertinent. His history is wrong. I take him when he avers that "two years after the Armistice, even before it has time to settle down and resume its normal development, violent attacks are levelled at it." I recall no violent attack upon the University. This paper made strong references to its financial mismanagers, which references were justified by the findings of the Commission. Violent attacks were then levelled at the China Mail for its criticisms, and it violently attacked its attackers (not the University) and routed them. That is the true history of that period. The China Mail has never attacked the University, and never will. No doubt this young man means well, but his self-sufficiency should not blind him to the heinousness of so misrepresenting those who are older and wiser than he. It may be typical of his controversial method to refer to the Government's donation of a million dollars as a "miserly" sum, but it is also extremely silly nonsense. Such extravagance encourages me to hope that he is also wrong in saying that the lecturers' disappointment by the pay and conditions are apathetic and painfully indifferent "to everything outside" their lectures, and sometimes even to these.

Is it possible he is correct in saying that the University library is not open to the students? If so, this absurd misuse of a library should be attended to at once. Precautions to prevent loss of or damage to books are one thing; closing a library to the students is another thing, and a very unimprudent thing.

Mr. Ng Cheong Yew CALLING. thinks that the lecturers and professors should "call" on the students. This is democracy run mad, and a long way from the traditional Chinese respect for teachers. It is to be feared that this young man is too sunny to benefit as much as he otherwise might from his stay at the University. If the students are to elect a spokesman "to speak for them at meetings of the Council or Senate," as Mr. Ng suggests, I dare to presume to advise them not to elect him. He is too Bolshevik to show the sweet reasonableness that all delegates should. There is a very excellent little Chinese poem, sometimes sung by coolies, which runs, as translated: "Tell me the difference, tell me the difference, Who is a wide man? Who is a fool?" A wise man seeks out what is unknown. Only a fool emphasizes the obvious.

THE SWORD. They tell me that the cathedral war memorial is a granite cross with a bronze sword affixed to it. If that is so, it is a standing monument of the fact that the church, entrusted with a message, has failed to deliver it correctly. All theology and hairsplitting to one side, one thing is clear, that Jesus preached peace and poverty, love and renunciation, as the path for Christians, and the Christian church is preaching something else.

WASHINGTON. You know how this phrase is used, how glibly it drops from the lips of the average man. "Don't wash your dirty linen in public," he says, with an unassuming air, apparently quite unconscious that in nine cases in every ten he is advising that dirty linen be not washed at all. Linen washing, in this cliché, always means criticism, and if anything in this uncertain world may take on the semblance of certainty, this is certain, that if the linen be dirty, the criticism must be public and open, or it will be ineffectual. Does the policeman take the burglar whom he catches into a quiet corner and whisper a friendly remonstrance in his unwilling ear? He does not, or at least we hope he does not, for in that case we pay him his enormous wage in vain. Does the auditor who finds falsified accounts shrink from washing that dirty linen with the publicity of red ink corrections and a certificate? Does the party responsible for dirty linen ever welcome the washerman however he may approach? He does not. In nine cases out of ten, as I have already said, the chief desire of the objector to public laundry work is the concealment of the dirt, at any cost, and his appreciation of the value of cleanliness is more than suspect.

I must have my joke, even when the subject is serious. Mr. Charles Fagile, writing to the Press about the terrible famine in North China, says: "Mr. Woon sends me samples of food used by the victims of the famine, collected during his house to house investigation in the villages." Is this not a fair illustration of the scriptural saying, "From him that hath not shall be taken even that which he hath."

Rubicond and jolly, he was a picture of happiness until a pessimistic friend called his attention to the fluctuations of the dollar, and made a certain suggestion to him. Making a hurried calculation, the happy one discovered that his salary, expressed in sterling, was £1,800 per annum a few months ago, and was now only £750. Joy left him at this awful discovery, and gloom settled upon his banner. A proof of the wisdom of the heavy sigh that where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be financially sophisticated.

Someone in Nuenen, Germany, has sent me a marked copy of the Local Kurier, containing "Ein Appell an die englische Verminst." This appeal might have appeared had they enclosed a translation, or even printed it in Roman type, but Herr Eckhardt, has no right to expect a busy publican like me to wade through two columns of German script to find out what it is that "ist gegenwärtig bestrebt" or something. In short, any "appeal" to the English commonsense should be made in an archaic type that tries both eye and temper. However, I have lost my faith I had in "die gesunde Vernunft" of Germans.

I dined once with a White Man in Hongkong who really and truly noticed a difference between verse and poetry. All men, as Professor Blackie once said, to drinking are much inclined, and what with his aperitifs (a wonderful cocktail he made) and beer, we both got into that state where the talk must be of the heart to heart kind if it is to succeed. After he had ascertained my college and my Lodge and my religious and political convictions, from my entirely disingenuous answers, he proceeded to tell me that in many ways I was like the wild ass that stamps over somebody's head in the Rubaiyat. We reached no real entente because our reading did not overlap sufficiently. I had the impulse at one time, after the seventh beer, to be frank; but what was the use of telling him that I was a re-incarnation of Julien in "Le Rouge et Le Noir," when he didn't know his Stendhal? He had that calm patrician polish in the address.

Which never can pass the equinoctial line. Of anything which Nature would express, while I was rude and Rabelaisian and as suspicious as a wild thing. An imaginative proletarian sees guile where none is, and consequently intercourse with the Heaven-born and well-bred is difficult. Fatuity is fashionable, and frightens intellect that is socially unhabilitated. Sprightly talkativeness sounds as human conversation must to a dog; but self-satisfied and self-important fatuity, so common here, is at once an incentive to and an excuse for homicide. Tobacco, digestion, beer, and talk-froth are good when they come together. Why expect me to avow an utterly unnecessary seriousness of purpose?

Illegitimate ambitions, Democratic rhetoricians, Persons prone to base submissions, Men of warlike dispositions, Wild and wicked statisticians, Metaphysical magicians, People apt to sign petitions, Simple slaves of superstitions, (the italics honestly admit an interpolation) what have these to do with Adversaria, or he with them? Let them that find offence and malice in the plainest of plain esprit, done in and for fun, to secure rapprochement between author and lector, wallow in their sense of grievance? I never said that Balzac was no gentleman; I only laughed because he lay upon the ground. I will not plead guilty. I will not confess that I have done things I ought not to have done, no, though all my friends, old and new, solicit me to be a miserable sinner. I pipe as happiness his herald, telling my feeble flute of fun, and will persist in my piping till the fundamental note of the last trumpet, which (the book he lent me tells me) is presumably D natural.

Why not, oh protestants, endeavour to acquire a working familiarity with the complete significance of the idea of the extensive duration of the state of deadness, and be more indulgent toward the poor mental harlequin who is doing his bit upon your very local stage? Smile (expressive apostrophe), smile. And oh, by the way, thanks for the dinner.

days of Women's Rights now firmly established, men have wrongs. She has set up as an equal, and therefore has abandoned her quondam claims upon my civility. No comfort do I get from this. I know it for jealousy, for a mean quibble, for a conscience deluding equivocation. The lady has said nothing, of course, but her eyes have spoken. Her whole attitude is speaking. There is a tension in the carriage of her body which informs me I am no gentleman. I remove my pipe from my mouth, and carry it in my hand, watching from the corner of an eye to see if there be any flicker denoting satisfaction. I detect none, and have the feeling that I have wasted an unnecessarily large tip upon an uncivil waiter. My appetite for tobacco in this keen morning air was never more avid. My nerves complain as the tram rumbles along. Perhaps, sing the bogie wheels to the rail joints, it does not matter, matter, matter. Perhaps she does not care at all—my even smoke herself, herself. The tram stops. She does not get off, although it seems to me a perfectly charming place for a lady to get off. Two men have got off, and are replaced by two Chinese workmen, quite close to us. One of them, my nose assures me, has not bathed since October. The other, less well dressed, why does he compel me to think of the name of Kipling? I have it, as the phrase, "they spew garlic smells," floats irresistibly across the surface of my mind. I sniff audibly, and look hard at my pipe. It has not yet gone out. One good draw would revive its fire. I catch the lady's eye. Is it possible that so obvious a gentlemanwoman...? But yes, I mark the faint firstling of a smile in the corner of that mobile mouth. Slowly, tentatively, I raise the pipe to my mouth, and then I am sure of it. Her face has put on a certain warmth, and I fill my mouth with the clean smoke, and eject it in a beautiful blue feather.

"Excuse me, Sir," the lady murmurs. "Would you mind telling me the name of the tobacco you are smoking? I would like my husband to get it." I boy, I produce and exhibit before her the box, with the name upon the lid. I murmur the name of the shop where she may get it. How happily this affair proceeds. As the lady descends, one station before mine, I discreetly admire her carriage, and I envy the unknown husband, so doubly blessed. He has the right sort of wife. Now he will have the right sort of tobacco. I would tell you its name, but that I am afraid the publicity would send up its price, already high.

Trying to impress my GEOLOGY. Boy with the immensity of my knowledge, I explained how Happy Valley was carved out by the action of water, and that it took millions of years to do it. "I savvy," said he. "All same government job."

I do not know very well that poem from which Sir Robert Ho Tung quoted at the Queen's College prize giving. I seem to recall that it was an exhortation to persevering effort. But while I was reading Sir Robert's speech, it struck me how pathetic is the common human itch, not to "make our lives sublime," but to leave "footprints on the sands of time." One wonders, having observed the fate of footprints on sand, if the poet intended that irony, so discouragingly inconsistent with the general purport of the poem; if taken literally, so much in keeping with the pessimism of Ecclesiastes. Of course, you and I, and Sir Robert Ho Tung also, I'm sure, realize that the object and advantage of "still pursuing" is not the mark our foot makes upon the beach, but the exhilaration and joy and health we get by running along the yellow sands. A dip dipped in ocean leaves as much of an impression as any of our efforts will make on Time; but eternity itself must confess that what we have done is done, and what we had we have had.

There is one too BAD CRITICISM. criticism that ought to be decently interred, it has been dead, and stinking, so long. It reappeared in a letter in the D.P. on Thursday, a writer saying: "If Mr. Ng is so dissatisfied with the University, why does he not leave it, instead of indulging in unfair attacks on those who are unable to defend themselves owing to their official positions." That is really a double-barrelled offence, and I will deal with the second barrel first. Those who remember the newspaper utterances of two of the University's most prominent officials will admit the hollowness of the suggestion that their official position silences them! Enough of that! It is the other against which I wish most to record my protest. "If you don't like it you may leave it" is never a fair answer to criticism. It would suppress criticism altogether if it were established. As applied to one's country, for example, it will not do. One has the latest remain there, and usually the desire; absurd to say we must not try to get the conditions of residence adapted to our liking. I am not defending the critic in this case. Elsewhere in these notes I have tried in my own way to crush him, that is to say, to destroy any chance of his wrong ideas surviving the fierce light I have thrown upon them. But I do not question his rights, either to continue to stay in the University, or to criticize it fairly so long as he stays. I rule "N" out of order there. He is at liberty to question my decision, in which case I should have to elaborate and justify it. What a bore.

One of those practical, political journalists, not engrossed in philosophical abstractions as I am, writes recently that Japan's policy in Siberia is to make it a buffer "to prevent Bolshevik ideas from filtering into Japan." Filtering is the right word, and it surprises me that it did not suggest to the writer the right idea, that filtration cannot be stopped with a buffer, nor result your intelligence, your regular readers of Adversaria, by enlarging and emphasizing this, by comparing air-borne germs and ideas? Shall I rub up my history, to point out how material weapons have always lost their fights with mental weapons? I think not. You have the point. Do your own intellectual embroidery.

A flicker of hope has come to me from this degenerate street, in the news that Philip Gibbs is to edit the Review of Reviews. I am not wantonly or willfully ungallant when I treat Estelle Stead as a brother, and say that she has not been equal to the job. I have not cared to open this monthly for a long time, and it used to be precious to me. Gibbs ought to be able to give us something even better than the output of its famous founder. I shall renew my subscription hopefully. If the Review of Reviews achieves the dispassionate attitude of the American monthly Current History, and at the same time retains a right Englishness, I shall feel that journalism has a chance of struggling out of the slime into which it has fallen.

I call high heaven to witness, though I cannot compel it to testify, that I have done my bit to encourage versifying in Hongkong. I consider it a wholesome pursuit. It entertains as host and guest. It certainly is as moral as golf. The China Mail, owing to my coaxings of its editor, has served as an asylum for infant poems and rickety rhymes, and, I doubt not, willing to be almost any house to senile sonnets and nonagenarian lyrics. The Spring is almost here, but Esau Hill is away, not yet. William Hill is still Keith West, I understand, is still serving his sentence. The others, the casuals, may appear before the swallow darts. I yearn to lead them, and my prayer is "Let 'em all come." Meanwhile, let me thrust the glad hand toward a new recruit, one G.R.M., whose first contribution we printed on Thursday. I am quite sure that all interested in poetry would regard Thursday as exalted over the other days, by reason of this simple lay, which smoothed out every sinus in the psychology of a bank clerk who wished to be a sailor and became a policeman. We have another of his in hand, entitled "Breezes." It deals with love. Not apparently, a current passion; for the poet's thoughts wander, to days of yore. The editor thinks they should be permitted to go on wandering for a little while longer, before coming to roost in the China Mail. I bow, as the poet will not permit this deferment to discourage further efforts. If it is not too presumptuous of me to suggest a little advice, I should like to remind him that while some women get clothes to fit their bodies, others get their bodies to fit their clothes. This is only superficially irrelevant. My drift is that poetry should be made to fit thoughts, not thoughts to fit poetry. This applies, with equal force, to journalistic prose; but who that inhabits a vicious domicile is not fond of throwing stones? The fact that the Pot was wrong to mention it in no way diminishes the blackness of the Kettle.

An old friend of mine, tweaking my nose behind my back, told me the other day that I haven't been up to form of late weeks. The editor came to me in consequence and hinted at a reduction of my emoluments. Et tu, Claudius. Luckily I was able to convince the Chief that the criticism must be baseless, that I can never be off form, since I am so essentially anonymous. I could see that noble word soaking into his understanding, and working beneficently like a dose of Eno, for his sundial of a countenance lighted up with one of those horizontal smiles of his, and presently he laughed. "I like his Falstaffian laugh. To breed one is a good deed. I told him the latest Spoonerism, which refers to the Peak Tramway as the Teak Tramway, and he went off quite cheerful."

fully, apparently (as I trust) forgetting all about his idea of reducing the tramway sum he pays me for these Saturday soliloquies of mine, which are, I maintain, always good value for the money, even when I am not violent and vituperative. Anyway, I have a card up my sleeve if any attempt is made to reduce my stipend. I'll sell my adversaria to The Rock.

Talking of stipends, they really ought not to report meetings at which bishops' salaries are discussed. It is an indecency. I see by the papers that the Cathedral is somewhat pressed for funds, and that the Bishop said, when the question of his stipend came up, that he regarded it impersonally, more in the interests of his successors than of his own. That reminds me of a story. Two Scotsmen met outside a pub, and they had between them only the price of one drink. Discussing the crisis, one of them saw a third approaching, and had an idea. He suggested that if they wiped their mouths, as if they had just had one, and invited the newcomer to have one, he would in his turn invite them to drink. The scheme worked. After the newcomer had left them, the originator of the scheme claimed credit for it. "Aye, man," said his companion. "It came off, but it was an awfu' risk." I suggest, more in mischief than with any idea of doing good, that when the Bishop told those inconspicuous Cathedral managers that his only concern was for his successors, he ran an awfu' risk. Suppose one of them had proposed that in these circumstances the matter might just as well stand over till the arrival of his successor?

Not being a regular member of the staff, I get no entertaining allowance. Any entertaining I do comes out of my own pocket, as the idiom has it. Consequently I suspect that I shiver more as a guest than as a host. As a guest I flatter myself I am nearly perfect. I pretend to listen when others talk. I am very careful to put all my spurs back. If the host says "Will you have a liqueur?" I always declare my abhorrence of liqueurs. If he says "What liqueur will you have?" (the proper formula, which I use when I am host) I say cognac. If I see a name like "Bilguy & Co." on the bottle, which I do in several Hongkong messes, I make a display of turning the poison on my palate, and when the host says "How is it?" I always smack my lips and say "Ah." That is tell, no lie, and it pleases him. He feels that he is a connoisseur entertaining a connoisseur, and the stuff does not seem to leave any stain on his carpet. But I often wish I could do more hosting, just to show 'em I had one host who, at the time, said, "I know you'll prefer your pipe. I cannot recommend these cigars." I paid $22 a bundle for them, and they are not worth the money. About two days before I leave Hongkong for ever, I hope to entertain that man, and show him. Of course I am not suggesting that he was a typical Hongkong host. Far from it. I do so much guessing here that I am in a position to declare he was unusual. If ever I write seriously about hostery and guestery here, it will be guests to whom I will offer most practical hints. I know one man who makes a fair host and a rotten guest. He comes late and goes early and has been known to criticize the soup. My last guest, a rubber planter from Malaya (so he scarcely counts, does he?) did not come at all. We had, however, a successful tip-in.

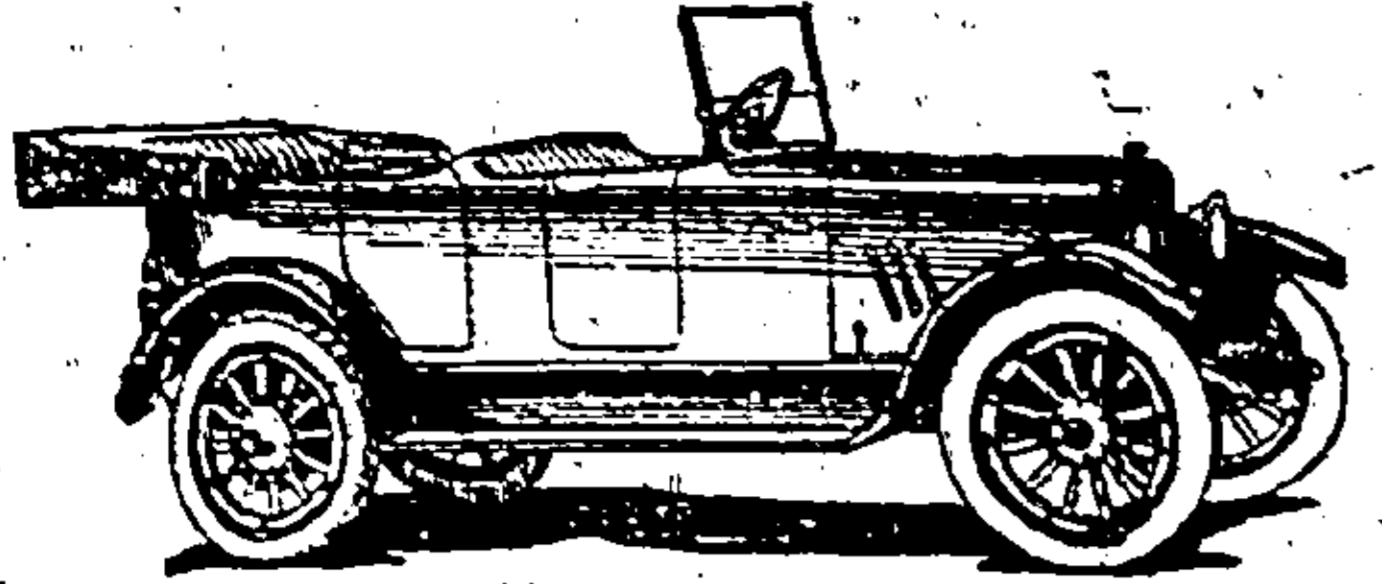

Mirth, says Max Beer, is one of the essays, is but a mode of escape from dark thoughts for some people. He was writing of Dr. Johnson, an "inherently melancholy" man. It were impertinence to remind a man like Max that escape is good; but I may tell it to you, in confidence, not to go any further, that mirth comes out of this without a stain upon its character.

O roads and lanes for ever going. Wherever you go? I seek you in the hope of knowing. And yet, somehow, I never know. You are in Spring your pashal hedgerows. As men at Easter wear new clothes Not till moons later do you flash the hedge rose. When honeyuckle perfume charms the nose. That's for a land where rooks set wardens. (Our local roads earn no such strains). Here have I sought and found Spring Gardens. But not my pet parlor Labea.

PALESTINE MANDATE.

CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS FREEDOM FOR ALL.

JEWISH NATIONAL HOME.

LONDON, February 4.
The text of the British draft mandate for Palestine, which will be submitted to the forthcoming meeting of the Council of the League of Nations at Geneva, as published in the Jewish Chronicle, provides for the mandatory's responsibility to place the country under such conditions as will secure the establishment of a Jewish national home, it being clearly understood that nothing is to be done that would be likely to prejudice the civil and religious rights of the existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights of Jews elsewhere. The immunities and privileges of foreigners enjoyed under the Turkish rule are definitely abrogated. The mandatory is held responsible for the free exercise of all forms of worship without discrimination. The administration is authorised to organise volunteer defence forces for the preservation of peace and order but is prohibited from raising other military, naval, or air forces.

JEWIS NOT SATISFIED.

The Palestine administration may contribute to the cost of the maintenance of the mandatory forces in Palestine. The mandatory is entitled to use the roads, railways, and ports for troop movements and transport. Equal rights are provided for the nationals of States who are members of the League of Nations. There will be no discrimination against their goods and their freedom of transit across the mandated area, but the Government may conclude a special customs agreement with any State which before the war was wholly included in Asiatic Turkey or Arabia. Mr. Balfour in a covering letter to the Secretary of the League of Nations, states that the British Government throughout has consulted the French Government with which it was in complete agreement. He emphasises that the present temporary arrangements in Palestine will shortly terminate. The Jewish Chronicle, in a leader, says that the mandate in no way fully meets Jewish aspirations.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

NEXT COUNCIL MEETING TO CONSIDER OPIUM QUESTION.

GENEVA, February 4.
The twelfth meeting of the Council of the League of Nations is being held at Geneva on February 21. The following nations will be represented:—France (M. Leon Bourgeois), Britain (Mr. Balfour or Mr. Fisher), Italy (Marquis Japierelli), Japan (Viscount Ishii), and China (Mr. Wellington Koo), also Belgium, Brazil, and Spain. The business includes the appointment of a mandates commission and five commissions to examine amendments to the Peace Treaty, economic blockade, opium traffic, etc. The council will study the questions of the Sarre Basin, Danzig, and disarmament, and receive documents with regard to mandates and other questions.

BIG CALCUTTA DOCK.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LAYS COMMEMORATION STONE.

CALCUTTA, February 4.
The Duke of Connaught laid the commemoration stone on the site of the new King George Dock situated in a garden five miles below Howrah Bridge. The dock, which will berth 35 ships, will have a water area of 190 acres. The length of the quay wall will be 25,000 feet. It is expected that 10,000 men will be continuously engaged in the work for at least six years.

IRISH MURDERS.

A DUBLIN COURT MARTIAL SENSATION.

LONDON, February 4.
There was a sensation at the Dublin court martial on youths charged in connection with the murders of officers on November 27, when the President announced that a message had been received stating that one of the witnesses for the prosecution would be unable to attend because he had been wounded by a would-be assassin. The court adjourned.

As agonized as a husband whose wife has eloped with another man—may, more unhappy than that, as wretched as a girl who has dropped her last chocolate in the mud, as a pedestrian pipe-smoker on Mount Parker without a match, or as a lottery winner who has lost his ticket, is the Bridge player with four to the ten, whose partner has failed to cover the led Jack with his Queen. Reverted is that man who obeys the commandment, "Cover an honour with an honour."

If you haven't much to do, can afford it, and can find a complaint prior, it must be great fun writing pamphlets. There is no sub-editor to plane off your salient indiscretions, no editor to pontificate "This must now cease." The China Mail people frequently receive pamphlets from cranks at home, and they sent me a couple this week to see if I could find a joke in them. One is a dreadfully involved and ambiguous essay on "The Hidden Hand," which, like the dictionary, does not seem to have much plot in it. The other is a vehement pleading against the monarchical system. I am academically and theoretically a Republican, but the argument (number 10) that "Government under monarchy may be likened to an organ grinder with a monkey attached to a strong chain" does not appeal to me.

If you turn to-day to my dog, the children's corner of my colleague, "Peter Pan," always worth reading, you will obtain valuable evidences of the dawning of literary imagination. Believe me as an expert talking, when I assure you that the dog, Wan To Shing is just as real to him as a real dog. I own a dog which for several years has been called "Peter Pan." He talks as clearly as Arthur White's parrot. Once he was on the wrong side of the door of a public room in which I was doing business with many men, and he started to sing. His song, in a high soprano, ran thus: "I am a very little dog, and this door is most unaccountably shut. The man I own is on the other side of it, and I am very peeved." All the men heard this, and laughed very much when I rose and let him in.

There is no record of Nelson having "actually fought an action at Ushant. The indecisive naval action of 1778 was fought under Admiral Keppel.

Talking about puns the other night, with a literary man who believes they can be so good that they justify themselves, I cited Tom Hood as a mine of good ones. Perhaps the best of all I know is in a foreign tongue, but it should convey its meaning to anyone of ordinary education. (To help the others, pardon me for explaining that "tutti" means "all" in Italian, "ma" "but," and "buona" "good.") Napoleon is supposed to have rudely told a Corsican lady that all Corsicans are liars. She replies, amiably, "Non tutti, Sire, ma Buona parte."

And now, friends all, an vale. And for the week I do hope I haven't made you late for church.

ARMED ROBBERY.

A HOLLYWOOD ROAD CASE.

INMATES OF FLAT TERRORISED.

Three men forcibly entered a flat in Hollywood Road about 8 o'clock last night, and after terrorising the inmates by flourishing swords and daggers, bound and gagged them all. The robbers then ransacked the house at their leisure, stealing clothing and jewellery valued at $207.60.

MORE LOCAL PIRACY.

ARMED MEN ON JUNK.

CIN DRINKERS' BAY ROBBERY.

On Wednesday night a consensary junk lying at anchor in Gin Drinkers' Bay was boarded by armed men who threatened to kill the steersman if he raised the alarm, and then locked him, with his wife and children, in a cabin, while they stole clothing, jewellery, and other property valued at $24.30. The steersman, whose folk were not on board at the time, noticed seven men in all, one of whom was armed with a dagger, another with a pole, and a third with an axe.

THEATRE ROYAL.

THE DENNISTON PLAYERS.

ANOTHER AMUSING FARCE.

Not the last successful of the many delightful farces presented by the Denniston Players during their season in Hongkong, was submitted to a crowded house in the Theatre Royal last night, when Margaret Mayo's "Baby Mine" was received with manifest enjoyment.

The play, in the hands of such capable players, was irresistibly funny. Left by her husband owing to an imaginary grievance, a young wife induces him to return by the news that she is the mother of a boy. The husband hurriedly returns before the friend of the family has had time to procure the necessary baby from a children's home. Is the amusing complications that follow not less than three babies are credited to the delighted husband. The deception becomes ever more intricate with the demand of first one parent and then the other for the return of their offspring, one of which had been stolen and the other two hired, until the climax brings disillusionment to the young husband.

The play was full of highly amusing situations and passages at arms, of which the Company made the most. Miss Florence Chapman and Mr. Leo Kennedy, as the young couple, were both excellent. Mr. Reginald Wykeham gave a very clever portrayal of the role of the overwrought friend, while Miss Pressy Preston was admirable as his exasperated wife. The remaining roles were filled with equal credit.

The popular selections played by the Band of the Wilts. Regiment were again much enjoyed.

Tonight the Company will play the "Unkissed Bride," an excellent farce in three acts by Charles Demarest.

Messrs. Waterhouse & Co's. godown keeper reports that sometime last night robbers broke into the godown during his absence, and after binding two of his folk, stole 120 rolls of black umbrella cloth.

The body of the 19 year-old boatman who was thrown overboard from her sampan by pirates a few days ago, has been recovered from the sea at the foreshore of Leungshawan, Lamma Island.

PRIZE DISTRIBUTION.

ST. PAUL'S GIRLS' SCHOOL.

LADY STUBBS ATTENDS.

St. Paul's Girls' School was the scene yesterday of the annual prize-giving, in the presence of a large assembly that apparently was much impressed by the progress shown by the children and the efficient management of the institution. The Bishop of Victoria presided. Lady Stubbs distributed the awards.

Before the prize-giving an entertaining concert was given by the scholars. The programme opened with the School song. Then came "The Four Seasons," represented by four girls in costume. A feature that was enjoyed was the playlet "Not quite a Bargain," in which a girl, tired of the crying of her baby sister, goes out to sell her for twenty dollars, only to discover that her natural feelings prevent her completing the bargain.

Miss Chang Oi Yau, one of the older girls, made an address in Chinese. Speaking from her own experience, she preferred studying in school to private tuition. One of the many factors that spurred the children to exert themselves in public school was the friendly competition. At home, the affection of their parents was apt to interfere with the progress of the studies. Miss Chang also urged parents to see that girls should receive the same privileges and facilities for study as boys are given, in order that they may be fitted both to manage families and take part in the affairs of their country. Miss Chang's speech was received with much applause.

The concert came to a close with a recitation by three diminutive children, who did wonders in the way of pronunciation. Such words as "hypercritical" and "arithmetical" were given with an ease that many an adult might have envied.

The visitors were provided with programmes, each of which had a different brush work design, the work of the scholars after only one year's training.

The Headmistress, Miss Woo, read the annual report, which follows:

In her report Miss Kitty Woo, headmistress, said:

I have much pleasure in extending our warmest welcome to the parents and friends, who have honoured us with their presence at this our sixth annual prize-giving. The School has steadily grown in every respect. The number on the roll is 170 as against 150 for the previous year. The average attendance during the past year was 145. Our School is now on the Government Grant list and the grant has enabled us to rent two more rooms and to engage more efficient teachers. Progress has been made in every department of work, but the subjects that are worthy of special mention are singing, drawing, Chinese and English compositions and pronunciation. We are greatly indebted to Miss Maill for taking charge of the singing, to Miss Lo Chai Wa for teaching drawing, to the Chinese teachers for teaching Chinese, and to Mrs. Updell for teaching English composition. To the labour of Miss Kotewall, Miss Wong and Miss Rathson is ascribed the clear pronunciation of the girls. I desire to thank Mrs. Hickling for having kindly given a course of lectures on Home Nursing during the last term, and also Miss Kotewall for helping in the practical work in connection with the lectures. We are glad to welcome back Miss Pitts whose kindly presence brightens our Kindergarten twice a week, teaching the children singing. She also takes a Bible class in the School. I mention with joy that three of the old girls who graduated last year have come back to us and are giving their services free to the School. They have rendered valuable help, not only to the School but to the girls individually by their unselfish example. I am sorry that several members of the Staff will soon leave us, after they have done such good work in the School. It is most encouraging to see that the spirit of unselfishness, self-denial and self-sacrifice of time and money for the poor and the uneducated is developing strongly in the character of our girls. They have all worked hard and in a spirit of mutual co-operation for the M.C.I., and have succeeded in obtaining $1,040.90 for the League, the second largest sum on the list. They have also given $205 to the Chinese Home Missionary Society, and will soon work up a play, specially written for the purpose, for the North China Famine Relief Fund. The bigger girls spent their last summer in opening a Summer School for the poor children in this neighbourhood. This school was conducted and managed entirely by the girls. The hours of studies were 7 to 9 a.m. and 10 to 12 p.m. The number of girls attended was nearly 70, and the school lasted five weeks. There is still a greater thing of which the girls have taken the initiative. It is the opening of a Free School in Tai Hing at Causeway Bay. It is called St. Paul's Girls' Free School, and the girls take a very keen interest in it. The Principal is a graduate of our School, and one of her two assistant teachers was a pupil here. This School has the maximum roll of 60, and we are proud of the results attained after a year's work. The Y.W.C.A. of our School is helping to develop the spiritual side of the girls as well as the social side. There are eight Bible classes conducted after school hours, and I wish to thank Miss Stewart and Rev. To Se Kai for conducting two of them. I should like here to thank Mrs. Wong Kam Fuk for the beautiful silver cup she has presented to the School. This cup is to be placed in the class that has the highest average marks in their monthly examinations. So far Chung Hok III. has the proud distinction of having held it every month, since it was given in September last.

In closing, I should like to say a few words to the girls. I hope that they come to school not only for the purpose of acquiring knowledge, but also with the object of endeavouring to seek the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness.

Lady Stubbs then presented the prizes. When she had completed the task, she thanked the girls for their splendid work in connection with the Children's Ministering League, the success of which this year owed much to the keen enthusiasm of Miss Woo. She hoped the school would continue to give its support to the Ministering Children's League and other charity efforts.

The Bishop of Victoria thanked Lady Stubbs for distributing the prizes. He said he was almost afraid to think how many prizes Lady Stubbs had given away during the last few days, but it must have been a considerable number. He congratulated Miss Woo on the excellent work she had done in the School, which, he believed, was the only veritable grand school with a Chinese lady at the head. He also congratulated the children for their nice entertainment and those who had trained them. This was his first winter in Hongkong and at the many prize-givings, which he attended, he was deeply impressed with the important work for the future that was being done in each of the schools. It was said that the only way into the life of a nation was through the hearts of the children and in this connection he was sure very important work was being done in each of these valuable institutions. Bishop Duppy took the opportunity of reminding those present of the famine concert to be held in the next three weeks.

A beautiful bouquet of roses and sweet peas was presented to Lady Stubbs. This concluded the proceedings, and the gathering departed after partaking of afternoon tea.

YOUR BLOOD WANTS
PURIFYING.

IF YOU are troubled with Eczema, Blisters, Spots, Pimples, Boils, Sores or Eruptions of any kind continually breaking through the skin.

IF YOU are suffering the ache and pain of Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Scrofulous and Ulcerated Sores, Glandular Swellings, Blood Poison, etc.

IF YOU have that constant itching and inflammation of Piles.

IF YOU are in the grip of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Gout, etc.

All these are sure signs of clogging blood impurity, calling for immediate treatment through the blood, so don't waste your time and money on useless lotions and messy ointments, which cannot get below the surface of the skin. What you want and what you must have is a medicine that will get right to the root of your trouble, a medicine that will thoroughly free the blood of the poisonous matter which alone is the true cause of all your suffering. Clarke's Blood Mixture is just such a medicine. It is composed of ingredients which quickly attack, overcome and expel from the blood all impurities (from whatever cause arising), and by recirculating it clean and pure, can be relied on to effect a lasting cure.

The True Value of CLARKE'S BLOOD MIXTURE is certified by a most remarkable selection of unselected testimonials from grateful patients of all classes—patients who have been cured after doctors and hospitals have given them up as incurable—patients who have been cured after trying many other treatments without success—patients who not only have been cured of the particular skin or blood complaint from which they were suffering, but also have found great improvement in their general health.
